Why Law at UTS?

- At the forefront of technology
 - The first in Australia, UTS Law's specialist major in Legal Futures and Technology will help you build the skills of the lawyer of the future
- Top of the class - The highest achieving UTS Law students get an edge with the Dean's Merit List Award, which is recognised across universities and the employment sector
- A more just world for all - Participate in the UTS Law Brennan Justice and Leadership program to engage with issues of social justice through lectures and volunteer work, and think about the role law has in creating a more equal world
- Real-world experience - UTS Law offers a range of ground-breaking initiatives, such as the Allens Neota Law Tech Challenge to connect students with industry partners and engage them in problem-solving by combining law and technology

NICHOLAS SAADY
Bachelor of Laws
(First Class Honours) (2018)

I am grateful for my experiences at UTS for two reasons. First, they equipped me to deal with the pressures of studying, living and working in a bustling city environment. Second, I feel that such a practical focus has enabled me to excel over here (New York City) in my approach to the study and practice of law - enabling me to identify issues and develop methods to resolve them, rather than getting caught up in theory.

Course description

Our UTS Bachelor of Laws has a clear-eyed focus: the law, how to apply it, and how to turn it into a career. As one of Sydney's leading law degrees, this course will help you build professional capabilities in all things law, as well as the 'soft' skills (problem solving, analytical thinking, spoken and written communication) required to get ahead in the workforce.

You'll become well-versed in the mechanisms – and quirks – of the Australian legal system, and you'll gain core skills in common law principles before you specialise. And if you're really set on starting your career as a legal practitioner in NSW as soon as possible, use your electives to complete your practical legal training and get ready for admission in just four years!

UTS Law offers the Bachelor of Laws standalone degree as a four-year program, or you can undertake a combined law degree with most other disciplines offered by UTS – science, IT, international studies, communications, and many more.
