

Participant Terms and Conditions

The University of Technology Sydney (UTS) Algal Phenomics Facility (APF) houses a series of clean rooms and containment laboratories meeting Australia’s PC2 codes. The UTS APF is a world-class facility seeking to provide research integrated capability focusing on phenomics solutions to the biotech, agriculture, and environmental sectors.

To support the growing and innovative biotechnology and biomanufacturing industry in NSW, UTS, through the Deep Green Biotech Hub (DGBH) is offering vouchers for eligible NSW small-to-medium enterprises (SMEs) and startups under their “Green Light” program. Eligible applicants can apply for an APF voucher (APF Voucher) to subsidize the costs associated with APF research services to be provided by UTS. All APF Vouchers will be subject to these terms and conditions.

The APF Vouchers program is a program administered and managed by the Climate Change Cluster (C3) which is a research institute of the UTS. C3 also administer and manage the DGBH. The program is dedicated to supporting the development of innovative biotech solutions in NSW across a broad range of industries. Supported by C3, the DGBH is hosted by UTS and the program will leverage the research strength of C3 to support training and development of projects put forward by NSW SMEs and start-ups (including entrepreneurs), and prioritize projects utilizing algae and those underpinned by an approach to sustainability. Any reference to C3 or DGBH in these terms and conditions is intended to refer to C3 or DGBH acting for and on behalf of UTS.

Successful eligible applicants selected for the APF Vouchers will receive access to subsidized research services currently offered through the APF facility (subject to these terms and conditions).

These terms and conditions set out the agreement between you, as an applicant for the Green Light APF Voucher program and UTS (through the DGBH).
